

Underground Fashion

by Angela Ambrosini-Haliski

Paris, being the center of the fashion world, has allowed yet another heartwarming, or shall I say leg warming season to make a come back. I suppose a season full of big belts and acid washed jeans just wasn't enough.

So what the fashion funk is this? Prairie skirts, floral and oh-so-pretty neon colors! Then again, I guess jelly bracelets and BAROQUES aren't so bad this time around. They might actually look good together - if you pull it off the right way.

In fact, they actually do look good- yes, even with the lights on. Perhaps it's because we think cooler this time around or maybe in ten years we will feel the after effects of this entire fashion era - by ripping apart every photo we ever took.

Fashion talk amongst friends and family can get extremely hypersensitive- so just remain underground. Yet when fashion has nowhere else to go it simply goes backwards - so why is everyone so sensitive? It's because everything exploded all at once!

This is perhaps the most interesting time in fashion for many years. It's as if every single style you have ever seen has been mixed together: 60's, 70's and the 80's all on one huge hanger. Metallic, sexy lace and high collared shirts for girls and for boys - well, if it isn't the tight, white "I'm your man," shirts then what can I say? We all win this fashion season. Women's shirts are shorter than ever and men will actually start those stomach crunches - just so they can go XS on their next outfit.

Therefore lighten up - go pink or gold. But, if you're in Paris or New York - you already have style. Just define it so that others can be envious.
